Your Child's Communication: FOURTH GRADE

By the end of fourth grade, your child should be able to do the following tasks in each area:

Listening

- Listen to and understand information
- Form opinions based on what she hears
- Listen for specific reasons, such as to learn, enjoy or convince

Speaking

- Use words in conversation correctly
- Use language for asking questions, arguing and joking
- Understand some figurative language
- Take part in group discussions
- Give correct directions to others
- Summarize ideas in his own words
- Organize information so it is clear
- Give clear speeches

Reading

- Read grade-level books smoothly with few mistakes
- Use what he knows to understand new material
- Follow written directions
- Take brief notes
- Link what she learns in one subject to other subjects
- Use reference materials, like a dictionary
- Think and talk about why the author wrote a book
- Read and understand different types of writing
- Make inferences from texts
- Talk about what she reads in her own words, called paraphrasing

Writing

- Write stories and explanations with many paragraphs about the same topic
- Develop a plan for writing that includes a beginning, middle and end
- Organize writing around a main idea
- Edit final copies for grammar, punctuation and spelling

Here are some things you can do to help your child learn to listen, speak, read and write.

- Find interesting books, magazines and news stories for your child to read
- Encourage active listening, like forming opinions and making connections to daily life
- Discuss links between what is read and heard at school, at home and in other daily activities
- Help your child spot spelling patterns, including word beginnings and word endings
- Talk about new words that your child hears
- Get your child to write letters, journal entries, blogs and short stories for fun
